The extra-session talk has again been revived. Governor Broward would relieve a long-suffering public by either calling the body together or announcing that he will not do so. Relieve the suspense, Governor, and be done with it.

The New York Commercial remarks that it is funny that, with all the suggestions offered for getting the hoarded money again into circulation, nobody has thought to suggest the suspension of the laws designed to curb the activities of burglars. The result would no doubt be immediate and effective.

Prices are higher in France, as they are here, and from the same causes. A dispatch from Paris deploring the excessive cost of living attributes it to "protectionism, militarism, improvement and wasteful public expenditures. Strikes, unionism, and bad legislation rushed through with feather-head levity."

As an evidence of the prosperity of Gainesville, the banks here did not have to resort to the policy of issuing certificates to depositors instead of paying them the currency when they presented their checks. Like all other business enterprises in Gainesville, the banks are upon a solid foundation, and the depositors have unlimited confidence in them.

It seems to us that the shipment of Spanish moss for holiday decorations must prove a profitable venture. Nothing makes a prettier decoration than our long, trailing Spanish moss. Spanish Banner. The Banner has suggested a venture which ought to prove profitable and deserves the attention of any enterprising man. There is a lot of Spanish moss in Alachua county to decorate the universe, and it is free for the asking.

to have Oak Democrat says, Frank Clark doesn't need to make a better speech all over the Second Congressional District than he made last Oak Monday night to get all votes necessary to secure his re-election over any adversary who might be induced to take the field against him. At present that adversary is in sight, and we suspect he will be conspicuous by his absence all during the campaign."

NO REPETITION.

Ex-Superintendent W. N. Sheats has announced that he will again be a candidate for the position of Superintendent of Public Instruction, saying that it is vindication which he seeks from the people rather than the office itself. Of course Mr. Holloway will want to be re-elected and we have no hesitancy in saying that if we are to have a repetition of the campaign of a few years ago between these two gentlemen then it were better that both of them be "snowed under" hard and sufficient and a new man be elected to the place.—Madison New Enterprise.

Editor Smith and others need have no fear of a repetition of the campaign of 1904 between Holloway and Sheats, as Superintendent Holloway has given his word through The Sun that he will not permit himself to be drawn into such a campaign under any circumstances. He has made a good official in every particular, and is justly entitled to renomination and election.

The extra session of the Alabama Legislature does not seem to have solved the railroad problem. The roads have secured an injunction from Judge Jones, of the United States Court, enjoining the enforcement of the laws enacted at the extra session regulating freight rates, on the ground that the same amount to confiscation of their property, as they claim they cannot make operating expenses and a reasonable rate of interest on money invested. It seems impossible for the railroads and Governor Comer to come to any amicable agreement.

All the concrete work on the big viaduct of the East Coast extension will be completed this month. They are now laying track on Knight's Key and passengers for Cuba can be handled on the road during the present season. But Hearst's Journal lately said the complete collapse of the scheme was breaking Mr. Flagler's heart, so it must be that Hearst's sense of decency will have a broken back soon—if the man ever had such a possession as spinal decency.—Times-Union.

Already a number of industrial plants have been forced to shut down. Says a dispatch from Wall Street, "owing to the money conditions, which means that these conditions are working their own cure." Such is the consolation of the Wall Street gamblers. Thousands of men are without employment. Prices of wheat and cotton have declined. And this is hailed as a godsend and a cure of hard times by the frenzied financiers who caused the panic.

The question of the economy of establishing a criminal court of record in Alachua county is being discussed by some members of the Gainesville bar. If the establishment of such a court should be deemed for the best interest of the county the enactment of the necessary law could be passed by procuring the required petition and Governor Broward calling the matter to the attention of the Legislature at the extra session, should he call one.

The people of Jacksonville had reason to give thanks last Thursday, the city council having decided to decrease the expenses of the city government instead of increasing the tax rate. Gainesville tax payers, however, had no such thing to be thankful for, nor will they next year unless some changes are made in the membership of the council at the election next April.

The rumor of a visit here of German warships when our fleet shall have departed for the Pacific seems to have been baseless. Germany doesn't believe in perfunctory calls by card.

College of Brazen Nose.
The odd name of Brazen Nose (Brasenose) arises from a combination of circumstances, some of which are among the most interesting features of the history of Oxford university. From the earliest period the members of the university and the townspeople were engaged in continual broils, breaking out sometimes into such violence that bloodshed ensued. The townspeople, however, appear to have had the best of it, and so again and again their antagonists withdrew from the place and left Oxford without a university. At one time Northampton was the place of their retreat; at another Stamford, in Lincolnshire. At this last named place were the remains of a Norman gateway belonging to one of the colleges thus established. On the door there was of old an iron ring fixed in a nose of brass, to serve the purpose of a knocker, and the college became known through that feature as Brazen Nose. On the return to Oxford, which took place after a little time, the members of the college took the name with them.—London Answers.

Terrors of the Skies.

In the aerial war of the future man will be staggered not by the spectacle, but by the slaughter. For the spectator there will be little to see beyond a number of faint gray linear objects like whetstones silhouetted against the sky. But each of these drab colored objects is an airship which can easily carry from ten to fifty torpedoes weighing from 110 to 165 pounds. The havoc wrought by a small fleet of Zeppelin airships would be frightful. It could pursue the fastest battleship and send it to the bottom. The battleship is at a terrible disadvantage. It is easily damaged from above. It has a speed of twenty-five knots against a speed of nearly thirty knots possessed by its adversary. Pursue the comparison to questions of cost and of crew. The Patrie, costing $60,000, with a crew of three, and Count Zeppelin's giant airship, costing $125,000, with a crew of six, are each capable of annihilating a battleship, value $10,000,000, with a crew of nearly 1,000 men.—Dr. Rudolf Martin in London Magazine.

The Traveler Guessed Well.
A captious traveler in northern Arkansas stopped by a fence to criticize a sear cornfield which met his disapproval. "Mighty small corn you have there!" he shouted to the man who was superintending the growth from a shady corner.
"Yep," said the Arkansan. "Planted the small kind."
"Looks mighty yellow to me for this time of year."
"Yep. Planted the yellow kind."
"Well," said the traveler severely, "I can't understand your method of farming. You won't get over half a crop there."
"Nope," said the Arkansan cheerfully. "You are shore a good guesser, stranger. Half a crop exactly, that's mine. I planted this on shares."—
